The Integrated Training Service of the Division of Policy, Evaluation and Training, in collaboration with other divisions of the Departments of Peacekeeping Operations and Field Support (DPKO-DFS) organized in UNHQ an induction training programme to facilitate the integration of new staff into the departments.

The training, which was held from 23-24 February, provided new staff members with basic information about peacekeeping, the role of DPKO and DFS, and issues of importance to the two departments.

The induction presented the opportunity for key offices and teams to outline their functions and major responsibilities as well as to share information on issues of departmental priorities including recent reviews and reforms. Other topics discussed included gender mainstreaming, sexual exploitation and abuse, protection of civilians, human rights, information management and security, planning, crisis management, field support and duties and obligations of staff members.
An evaluation and satisfaction survey was conducted at the end, where participants expressed their satisfaction with the training programme, with some noting that it is an eye opener and helps new staff to catch up faster on the job.

Overall, the training aimed at assisting participants to enhance their familiarity with the work of the departments while providing them with the necessary knowledge to adapt to the organizational culture and contribute to existing work processes.
